What winning really feels like.

Dearest Chicks,

There's something electric about being part of a winning team—and this summer, OKC is buzzing with the joy of victory. Our Thunder just brought home the NBA Championship, and whether you were screaming courtside or watching with family or friends at home like I did, you felt it. The collective spirit. The grit. The glory. That parade where 700,000 fans gathered to celebrate. Damn, it felt good.

It reminds me why we created Chicks in Charge. Because boldness isn't just about going big—it's about going together. Like our Thunder, we rise when each person plays their part, trusts the process, and shows up with heart.

This season, let their story be your inspiration. Rally your squad. Play to your strengths. And when the buzzer sounds—whether it's in business, wellness, or life—you'll look around and know: we did it.

In this issue, we get to hear from Jen who got to be a part of the Thunder playoffs with her cake creativity. We also hear from Meredith who braved her first solo trip and Angie who saw beauty in a new way in Africa. We also share some big and small Goal GettHers wins in work, wealth and wellness.

Here's to a summer of bold wins, big feels, and shared success.

In your corner, always,

THUNDERING SUCCESS FOR LOCAL BAKER

Jen Havenar shares her journey as a cake boss and her recent dream Thunder win.

Back in the summer of 2011, I was a recent stay at home mom. I had quit my job and wanted to raise my daughter like my mom raised my sister and I.

During that time, one day my mom randomly suggested that I learn how to make cakes. Mind you, at this point in my life, I couldn't even bake a cake from a box to save my life. She offered to bake my cakes so I could take them to class and learn the basics of cake decorating. August 26, 2011 was the start of a new found love!

After a six week course at MNTC, I was consistently on YouTube looking up how-to videos and practicing everything I was soaking in. Fourteen years later, here I am still loving it and grown what was once a hobby into a full time career and passion!

Q. You got a cool gig providing cakes for the suites for the Thunder playoffs. How did that happen?

How did you get the Thunder gig: A sweet customer turned friend of mine has been ordering cakes from me for her family for a few of years. Two years ago, she had asked me what I would think about making cakes for the Thunder. I was speechless! I found out then that she works at the Paycom Center and instantly became my connection. After a couple of years of making small cakes, cupcakes, cookie sandwiches, and mini cheesecakes for the some of the suites during the playoff season, the Thunder made it to the Finals. She called me and said "If we make it to the Finals and we're going big. Are you ready?" Nervously, I said yes. And she replied "We're going to need 42 cakes for all 42 suites." I was all for it! The Thunder won the WCF in Game 5 and the rest is history.

Q. Share a bit about your creative inspiration and process.

The inspiration for the cakes actually came from 4 small cakes I had done for the Thunder staff 2 years prior. They wanted something fun, celebratory, and all thunder themed. So I took those designs, made some adjustments for something fresh and just let the icing flow. The process of putting all the cakes together took me 4 days and 42 hours. I had a some behind the scenes help from my daughter and my parents (they truly are my biggest supporters). Day 1 was baking, day 2 was leveling and filling, day 3 was base coats, and day 4 was adding all the details to each cake. It truly was an incredible experience, one of the biggest achievements in my baking career! It has me ready for the next chapter of the journey!

FROG = Focus Reaches Our Goals

Where your focus goes, your energy flows, & your life grows.

Magic happens in the present moment so what ACTIONS are you taking right now to make your dreams come true?

At Goal GettHers we use a Focus Pocus planner and prioritize up to 3 things in each category:

I filed my LLC paperwork – better late than never.
Julie Reising, LMFT

I’m 3 transactions away from meeting my goal on homes sold this year!!
Angie Grant, Realtor

I’m up 20% in this

I have lost weight just by tweaking water intake, stopping some medications that were not serving me and adding more movement.
I have noticed small changes in my body, energy and sleep.
I started journaling at night again and it has really helped me balance some thoughts that were trying to take me down.
I have gained more customers to love on by just being present.
Posting daily and following up with more meaning. Shelli Hibberd

BOLD BEAUTY IN AFRICA

Angie Cooper, A/C Aesthetics Shares the Aesthetics of a Safari in South Africa

In our fast-paced, hyper-connected world, it's rare to truly slow down. Even on vacations, we often rush to check boxes: see the sights, snap the photos, then move on. But in South Africa—a land that pulses with primal beauty, wild rhythms, and ancient silence—you're invited to do something radically different: pause, breathe, and take in the majestic aesthetic of the animal kingdom.

The Emotional Aesthetic

There's an emotional aesthetic to witnessing animals in the wild. It's not just about what you see—it's about what you feel. A cheetah's sleek form is thrilling, but it's the focused tension in her muscles that stirs something deeper. A baby elephant playing in the mud delights, but it's the maternal protection from the herd that truly warms the heart.

To sit with lions is to be reminded of aesthetic in its purest form—not constructed or curated, but wild, raw, and unapologetically real. Their beauty isn't for performance—it simply exists, fiercely and freely. To not just see them, but to feel them—deep in your chest, in your breath, in your sense of awe. These moments awaken something ancient in us—the part that remembers we are also animals, part of the same circle of life. Perhaps that's the most profound lesson they offer: true aesthetic doesn't seek to impress. It just is.

The Aesthetic Art of the Wild

It's not just the landscapes that inspire awe—it's the way life moves within the animals. A sensory reset. As the Land Rover crunches across the earth and the wind rushes past your ears, time stretches. You begin to observe differently—noticing how a herd of impala moves like a wave, how a rhino flicks its ears, how silence settles like a blanket after a lion's roar. A lion's mane, backlit by the rising sun, becomes a crown of fire. The black-and-white elegance of a zebra herd grazing at dawn resembles a living painting. Elephants, with their wise eyes and slow, lumbering grace, carry the weight of centuries in each step. A giraffe bends delicately to sip water, as if choreographed in a ballet. Here, animals aren't just part of the scenery—they are the scenery. Each encounter feels like a masterclass in presence, in beauty, in stillness. Technology fades into the background. There's no rush. You wait. You watch. You breathe. And in that stillness, you begin to return to yourself.

The Aesthetic Stillness Speaks

There's a powerful aesthetic in the lion's stillness. A lion at rest is a study in peace and quiet strength. He lies, unbothered, in the shade of an acacia, breathing deeply. No fear. No rush. Just presence. That stillness is as beautiful as any movement—a reminder that true power doesn't need to announce itself. Just as leaders with power we do not need to be announced, we just are as a lioness rises, however, her motion is poetry. Sleek and muscular, she moves with a purpose that's both nurturing and lethal. Watching her stalk through the grass, eyes fixed ahead, is to witness design at its most refined—where form and function blend into silent elegance. And there we are found in true aesthetic stillness.

AESTHETIC mood

A lion's mane, backlit by the rising sun, becomes a crown of fire. The black-and-white elegance of a zebra herd grazing at dawn resembles a living painting. Elephants, with their wise eyes and slow, lumbering grace, carry the weight of centuries in each step. A giraffe bends delicately to sip water, as if choreographed in a ballet. Here, animals aren't just part of the scenery—they are the scenery. Each encounter feels like a masterclass in presence, in beauty, in stillness. Technology fades into the background. There's no rush. You wait. You watch. You breathe. And in that stillness, you begin to return to yourself.

To travel to South Africa is to be invited into nature's gallery. It's where animals don't perform—they just are, and that being is enough to take your breath away. So, go. Not to rush. Not to "do it all." But to simply be—quietly, reverently—in the presence of creatures that remind us how to live fully, deeply, and beautifully. Sometimes, the wild is not a place to escape to—it's a place to come home. Just be you. The glorious you. Whatever it is to be comfortable in your skin, to enjoy life to the fullest and be well!

ROOSEVELT ROW

FORGET FOMO: GO SOLO

BY MEREDITH SENSE-CRUZ, EMPOWERED & INTIMATE

What made you decide to do a solo trip and how did you decide on your destination?

I am most fulfilled when I get to travel and I was long overdue for an adults only trip. My original plan was to do a trip with my best friend, however, we couldn't get our schedules to line up as quickly as I wanted to go, so I made the decision to go alone this time. I didn't put a lot of thought into the destination, I had enough airline miles to cover round trip to a few different locations and Phoenix felt like it would be the safest out of my options.

What did it feel like to travel alone and what were the top 3 highlights of your trip?

It was HEAVENLY to travel alone! I really enjoy being by myself so once I removed the pressure of having to worry about anyone else's needs, it made it easy to live in the moment and enjoy it.

My top 3 highlights:

1. The sunrise hot air balloon ride with Rainbow Ryders, Phoenix was the best part of the trip! I even met some other women traveling alone and we had brunch together after!
2. I loved getting to see Neil DeGrasse Tyson lecture on Astrophysics in the Movies. 🧐
3. The area I stayed in, Roosevelt Row, was the perfect artsy vibe with cute boutiques, plenty of good places to eat, and fun street art. I definitely got my steps in exploring! Plus it was a 5 minute ride to downtown Phoenix where I was able to do more exploring

Was safety a concern and what would you recommend for other women if they plan to travel solo?

Safety is always a front of mind concern for me so I stay pretty alert and take the regular precautions, however being by myself took away the stress of having to also look out for someone else. For this trip I did make sure to take my pepper spray (be sure to put this in your checked bag if flying) plus I have a portable door lock that I highly recommend for added security of your room. This is perfect for all door types:

Would you do it again? And, if so, where to next? :)

Absolutely! Planning a trip full of activities catered solely to me, then changing that plan as my mood changed is a dopamine rush I will be seeking again soon! I'm currently looking at an adults only, riverside resort in Texas, but I'm always adding to list of destinations so we'll see where I end up. 😊

SOUL-STIRRING DESTINATIONS EVERY WOMAN SHOULD EXPERIENCE

by Erin Smith, Travel Advisor, Cultivating Connections

There's something powerful about women exploring the world on their own terms. Whether you're celebrating a milestone, seeking connection, or simply craving adventure, these three destinations offer beauty, depth, and a touch of magic.

Cape Town, South Africa is bold and breathtaking. From hiking Table Mountain at sunrise to sipping wine in Stellenbosch, this area is where wild nature meets sophisticated charm. One of my favorite moments? Walking alongside the penguins at Boulders Beach. Proof that the unexpected often becomes the most unforgettable.

Iceland is pure wonder. It's not just the waterfalls and glaciers, it's the sense of peace and possibility. Soaking in a naturally heated geothermal pool, surrounded by surreal volcanic landscapes, is both grounding and awe-inspiring.

Santorini, Greece invites you to slow down and savor. Beyond the whitewashed villages and cliffside views, the island's vibrant wine scene makes it a perfect spot to reconnect whether with yourself or your partner, over a glass of crisp Assyrtiko at sunset.

Feeling inspired? Start dreaming now and let these destinations stir something new in you. The world is waiting. And it's even better when shared.
